All cot rails are to be raised to their highest position when your baby is in a cot with the Lullabub.

Always install and use the Lullabub modules as directed. Failure to do so will render the warranty void.

Babyhugs Pty Ltd in conjunction with SIDS recommend to lay your baby to sleep on their back with their feet at the base of the cot.

Lullabub should not be used in conjunction with infant monitoring devices such as SIDS monitors or other devices which detect motion. Such devices may interpret the movement of the cot as baby movement just as they do with other electrical appliances such as electric fans (including ceiling fans).

Lullabub has not been tested for use with sensitive monitoring equipment such as that used for sick babies in neo-natal units in hospitals. The Lullabub operates on a small electro magnet which may cause interference to such equipment.

Most cot accidents are caused by entrapment from poor cot design or inappropriately fitted mattresses.

Lullabub should only be used with cots that comply with current design standards and properly fitted mattresses. For a list of standards for cots please visit our website at www.lullabub.com/cots.

The use of the Lullabub will increase the overall height of the cot from 35mm to 70mm. By using a Standards approved cot this extra height does not change any dimensions to the cot for it to maintain the Standard. The recommended age for babies in the cot supported by the Lullabub is from birth to 18 months. To reduce a potential fall from a cot, if your baby is able to climb up and over the cot please discontinue use of the Lullabub.

Do not overload your Lullabub. Lullabub should be used for cots of up to 48kgs and babies of up to 12kgs so that total weight of baby and cot is no more than 60kgs. Do not place more than one baby in the cot at any time whilst mounted on the Lullabub module
